Revisions: A Journal of Christian Perspective

The primary responsibility of the Revisions Committee is the publication of Revisions: A Journal of Christian Perspective. While the position is particularly time intensive during the publication and formatting times (3 times/school year), it also involves reflective writing and extending an invitation and call for writers throughout the year. In addition, the position (particularly the editor-in-chief) requires one to be creative as to how to make the journal as accessible to the whole Princeton population while maintaining its integrity as a Christian literary piece. As with all of the leadership positions of Manna, this role is one of serving through love, which finds its source in the true vine of Jesus Christ.

In addition to the general ST responsibilities, the Revisions Committee has the following specific responsibilities:

1. Regularly reflect upon and write about the Christian life for others to read and personally consider.
2. Solicit a call for writers throughout the year.
3. Edit, format, and publish 2-3 editions / school year.
4. Be constantly considering creative topics that are sensitive to the patterns and trends in students' spiritual lives on campus.

Goals:

He who desires to lead desires a noble thing. Relying on the Holy Spirit to accomplish realistic and gospel-centered objectives to the gloy of God this year, what are three goals that you hope to accomplish for Christ and His Kingdom at Princeton as a member of Manna's Revisions team. Take some time to prayerfully write at least three goals down. Return to this page often to remind yourself of the objectives you've set, trusting that God will provide the strength through His Spirit to accomplish them for His glory.
